CINCINNATI'S ARMORY.

NEW QUARTERS OF THE FIRST REGIMENT OHIO NATIONAL GUARDS.

The Largest Infantry Drill Room in the United States—A Description of the Most Modern Building of Its Kind in the Country.

The finest and largest and in all respects the most economically constructed building erected in Cincinnati last year (excepting only the great chamber of commerce), is the new armory building of the First regiment Ohio National Guards. For years this crack regiment of the Buckeye state has had its home in an old roomy that could not sustain the tread of marching feet, and would barely support the stacked arms of the regiment, so that the drilling squad, company and regimental, has been done on one of the largest market squares in the city. The humble acquiescence of the soldier boys in their fate, added to their undaunted persistence, at last touched the hearts of the legislators, and a bill was passed giving Hamilton county authority to issue and sell bonds to the amount of $100,000, the proceeds to be expended by a commission in building and furnishing an armory building upon a lot secured by the county for that purpose, upon a 5 per cent. lease, with perpetual privilege of purchase at $30,000. Since the passage of the bill the work has not been suffered to lag, and the building is now practically finished. The armory building covers the entire lot of 171,300 feet, fronting on Freeman street and extending through to Duane street. The building presents some new features in armory construction. In the first place, it is the only armory of its size that is a combination of facilities for both infantry and cavalry. It is thoroughly equipped with the United States army regulation supplies. The building is fitted to accommodate a full regiment and a battery of artillery of six guns, and is so arranged as to give the company a liberal amount of room in which each soldier is provided with a locker for his effects, and also a large parlor or club room.

In addition to these company accommodations there is room for each commissioned officer and non-commissioned officers, and conveniences for the staff and non-commissioned officers. There are also provided separate office headquarters for the colonel, major of artillery and all the administrative officers, a large general parlor, a reception room and a room that will probably be devoted to feature distinctive of club life.

From the headquarters floor a half flight of steps ascends to the level of the infantry drill room, which presents the largest superficial area of any armory in the United States, unobstructed by post or pillar, and capable of accommodating 21,000 men.

This hall is 153x220 feet, and 45 feet from floor to ceiling. To secure this hall it was necessary to extend the hall over the battery drill room in the basement. In order to do this and preserve the battery drill room clear of pillared obstruction throughout its area of 100x140 feet, the projecting portion of the infantry drill room is supported by a system of six double trusses, resting upon piers built from the foundation for that exclusive purpose, and having no point of contact with the walls of the building proper. The floor of the drill room is also supported by trusses. The floor is double, the under course being pine laid diagonally; the upper of hard maple 1 inch thick and 24 inches wide.

From the headquarters floor stairs lead to the basement corridor, extending through the center of the building to the battery drill room. This room is 100x140 feet, without pillared obstruction. The floor is an experiment in the United States, being made of a mixture of equal parts of hard pine and plaster's hair, and presents a springy, hard surface. It is the same as used in English armories for cavalry drill. This room opens on the basement by four large doors so adjusted that all the guns of the battery can be run out at the same time.

On the same floor, and on either side of the corridor, are lavatories and kitchen, furnace, guard and store rooms, magazine, gunnery, cloaks, forges, etc., and two rooms for square drill each 50 x 60 feet. On the south side there is a rifle range 16 feet wide and 100 yards in the clear, provided with steel shutters and all proper appliances for target practice. On the north side there are stables and feeding accommodations for twenty-six horses.

The front of the building rises 100 feet from the curb line, and is surmounted by a square Norman tower, in which are the rooms of the land of the regiment, and also three rooms for the janitor. The facade of the building is built of stock brick. This was accomplished through the self sacrifice of E. Cort Williams, Esq., one of the commissioners. The other commissioners, William B. Smith and Sol P. Kinney, devoted their services without reserve to the project, and the result is that the First regiment Ohio National Guards has an armory worth from $50 to 60 per cent more than its actual cost. A quite remarkable thing for these days of extravagant recklessness in public building is that the work has been done within the appropriation.

NO CURE FOR BALDNESS.

A Temorist Artist Says a Fortune Awaits the Man Who Can Solve the Riddle. "Can hair be made to grow on bald heads?" Said a fashionable hairdresser, in response to a reporter's query: "Yes; and no. If a person becomes bald owing to illness the hair can be made to grow again. In fact, it will grow again without making, but it can be aided and stimulated in its growth by tonics. But if a person is deprived of his or her hair by natural loss of vitality, it will not grow again, and nothing has ever been compounded that will restore it. Natural baldness comes on gradually, and the awful day of its complete triumph over the hair's existence may be postponed by the use of tonics, but the final catastrophe can't be prevented. Long experience has taught me that fact, although years ago I had the personal opinion of the renowned Dr. Bazin, of Paris, to that effect. I have dressed heads for more than a quarter of a century. I have laments with hundreds of my patrons from whose heads not only the hair of time but the indiscretions and carelessness of youth were gradually and persistently plucking the natural and often luxuriant covering, and have anointed, drenched and plastered their too supple polls with lotions, tonics and pomatums, and rubbed and kneaded and manipulated their falling scalp until, if there had been one ember of hair left clinging there, it must surely have been rescued by my efforts. I have seen and handled them the card of the wigmaker. If I have used one hair restorative I have used 500, and every one was warned to not only prevent the loss but to restore to bald heads their sometime lustrous glory. Look at me. See what a remarkable growth and youthful gloss of hair I have. It has not changed in twenty-five years. Why? The hair dresser seized his soft brush, hair with both hands, and with a vicious jerk removed it from his head. It was a costly wig, and his head was white and bare as a billiard ball.

"That is why," he murmured bitterly. "And I am not a hair dresser, but one skilled in every tonorial art! If there were help for baldness other than the skill of the wig maker, do you suppose for a moment that I, of all men, would not know it, and knowing it, would not have rescued myself, but have sold to myself hundreds of my most profitable customers? If that is not proof enough that a man once bald is always bald, just call to mind doctors of your own acquaintance who are bald as glass globes. They are learned in the mysteries of drugs and their preparation. They know what result their combination and application will produce. If any one living were capable of curing baldness some one among these experts in the science of medicines would do it. You never had occasion to go to a doctor to get a prescription for baldness. I have."

"Come to me for a cure for anything else," my medical adviser said. "Anything else," said he, "and I will cure you. But I am not a hair dresser, but one skilled in every tonorial art! If there were help for baldness other than the skill of the wig maker, do you suppose for a moment that I, of all men, would not know it, and knowing it, would not have rescued myself, but have sold to myself hundreds of my most profitable customers? A Bivalve of the Virginia Natural Bridge. High up in the crust of the mountains on the Birmingham, Sheffield and Tennessee River railroad there is to be found one of nature's wonders. It is a natural bridge, as complete as a perfect arch, symmetrical in design, and of a size so remarkable that the great natural bridge of Virginia.

The bridge lies between the stations of Lynn and Delmar. It is about fifty-eight miles from Sheffield and twenty-nine miles from Delmar. It is a natural bridge, as complete as a perfect arch, symmetrical in design, and of a size so remarkable that the great natural bridge of Virginia.

Persevere. The cause of nine parts in ten of the lamentable failures which occur in men's undertakings lies not in the want of talents, or the will to use them, but in the vacillating and desultory way of using them. The man who is not sure of his starting away at each little difficulty, and thus applying the force which might conquer any one difficulty to all series of difficulties so large that no human force can conquer them. Commend me therefore to the man who is sure of his starting away at each little difficulty, and thus applying the force which might conquer any one difficulty to all series of difficulties so large that no human force can conquer them.

A Simple Scientific Experiment. Take a bottle and place a cork over the mouth. The cork must be sufficiently large to rest lightly upon the neck, without falling into the neck. Snap the neck of the bottle with a sharp blow, and the cork will fly off. The cork will fall from the bottle towards the hand giving the blow, and not away from it, as might be expected. This effect is due to the principle of inertia, the quick blow forcing, as it were, the bottle away from the cork before the motion can be transmitted to the cork itself.—Buffalo Times.

How They Were Made. Among exclamations in common use "Hullo!" and "Hurrah!" have curious origins attributed to them. It is said by the author of the "Queen's English" that the people of Cornwall, when they were celebrating, when they desired to hail a person at a distance call out not "hullo!" but "hallo!" This he imagines is a survival of the times when one cried to another: "A loop! a loop!" or as we would now say, "Wot! wot!" "Hurrah!" again, according to M. Littré, is derived from the Slavonic huraj, "to Paradise," which signifies that all soldiers who fight valiantly went straight to heaven. "Prius" is obviously a corruption of "I pray thee," while "merry" was originally a method of swearing by the Virgin Mary.—All the Year Round.

Summer Mince Pie. One cupful of chopped raisins, one cupful of rolled crackers, one cupful of molasses, one cupful of brown sugar, one-half cupful of vinegar, one-half of a teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-half of a teaspoonful of allspice and cloves, one-half of a nutmeg, one-fourth of a cupful of melted butter. Bake in two crusts.

The Land of Promise.

Mr. F. N. Barrett, the editor of the American Grocer, recently paid a visit to the far west. Like all observing men, he noted down his impressions as he went along and the result has been a most interesting budget of reading matter for his subscribers. Arizona comes in for a very large share of praise. We have no room for it all but give a few extracts: "I must skip New Mexico and ask forbearance while I say something about Arizona. This territory is with twenty-five square miles the area of New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Connecticut and Massachusetts, which five states contain 15,000,000 or more inhabitants, while Arizona has about 50,000; the guide-books say 40,000. Said D. O. Riddan, manager of the Arizona Lumber Co.: 'Every mile of the way is full of never-ending interest, which does not cease with familiarity.' My experience confirms his statement. It is the land of wonders, the land of promise, the future homes of tens of millions, where they can enjoy a climate that would captivate the gods. Five minutes in Flagstaff, a typical frontier town, and the impression is made. Located at its growth to a great city was sure. I found at the station several New Yorkers, whose invitation to spend the Sabbath at Al ranch, owned by the Arizona Land & Cattle Co., was so urgent and cordial that I accepted. This ranch covers 246,000 acres and so controls the water supply that its cattle can graze on 1,000,000 acres. Nearly one-half of this property is covered by pine timber. All day long one can ride through natural parks that throw into insignificance the finest portions of Central and Prospekt Parks. Undulating hills, with little valleys between them that widen out upon larger valleys, presenting views of surprising loveliness. At 7 a. m. the thermometer is 40° F. The headquarters are at a fort with coral built by the Mormons in 1877, in the center of a valley containing nine square miles, fringed on three sides with low, billowy, pine covered hills; on the fourth guarded by Mounts Agassiz and Humphreys, towering 13,000 feet or over, beneath such a blue sky as to charm Italy, their snow-capped peaks defying the power of the sun, which at mid day sends waves of heat racing over the surrounding plains and valleys.
